

Gerin Oil

Gerin Oil (or Gerinoid, to give it its scientific name) is a powerful drug that acts directly on the central nervous system to produce a range of symptoms, often of an antisocial or self-damaging nature. It can permanently modify the child brain to produce adult disorders, including dangerous delusions that are hard to treat. The four doomed flights of September 11, 2001, were Gerin Oil trips: all nineteen of the hijackers were high on the drug at the time. Historically, Gerinoid was responsible for atrocities such as the Salem Witch-hunts and the massacres of native South Americans by Conquistadores. Gerin Oil fuelled most of the wars of the European Middle Ages and, in more recent times, the carnage that attended the partitioning of the Indian subcontinent and of Ireland. Gerin Oil intoxication can drive previ-

date the original leader's death, and may expand into bizarre psychodelia such as the cannibalistic fantasy of "drinking the blood and eating the flesh" of the leader. Chronic abuse of Gerinoid can lead to "bad trips," in which the user suffers terrifying delusions, including fears of being tortured, not in the real world but in a "postmortem fantasy world." Bad trips of this kind are bound up with a morbid punishment-love that is as characteristic of this drug as the obsessive fear of sexuality already noted. The

"Gerin Oil does not seem to reduce the libido per se, but it frequently leads to a preoccupation with reducing the sexual pleasure of others."
